

Today being mothers day id like us to focus on mothers. Let us pray

Dear God

Today I bring before you Mothers who mourn and today whose grief is magnified who feel unseen and are reminded of that today who struggle every day just to survive but keep fighting for their children who feel not good enough because they can't provide for their children

Who are forced to make difficult choices in the best interest of their children like leaving their children alone so they can get to work

Who society say are too young to be mothers and yet they continue to do their best.

who mother from a place of never having been mothered and question each choice they make who are scared and afraid for the well being of their children because society sees their children as different

Single mothers who feel exhausted but have no where to turn who are forced by circumstances beyond their control to raise their children in dangerous places who wish with every fibre of their being that things could be different for their children

Mothers who feel isolated and alone and each day is a struggle

Mothers whose children are sick and who would give everything to heal their children

Mothers who are sick and don't know where they will find the energy to be there for their children

On this day may all mothers know your unconditional love , a love which is always available regardless of circumstances. And may that love give them what they need to continue for yet another day

And may we who know that love reach out to others in way which allows them to feel included if only for a little while

Amen
